

Verdugo Hills High School, Tujunga, CA

Public School

Verdugo Hills High School (also known as VHHS) is located in the scenic twin community of Sunland-Tujunga in the foothills of the San Gabriel Mountains, about 14 miles north of the Los Angeles civic center. The San Gabriel Mountains, with its series of magnificent mountain peaks that separate the Los Angeles basin from the Mojave Desert, forms the north and northeast borders of the valley while the Verdugo Mountains separate the Tujunga Valley from the communities of Glendale, Burbank, and the rest of the Los Angeles metropolitan area to the south. Verdugo has the 6th highest API of all comprehensive LAUSD high schools. There are over 50 different types of courses taught at VHHS in disciplines as diverse as art, science, mathematics, language, multimedia, business, music, social science, communications, industrial and occupational arts. In addition, the school has an extensive interscholastic athletics program with an outstanding record of championship achievement by its various sports teams.
